About AAHAM

The American Association of Healthcare Administrative Management (AAHAM) was founded in 1968 as the American Guild of Patient Account Management (AGPAM), as a national membership association for healthcare administrative management professionals. Over the years, AAHAM has evolved into a prominent organization in the healthcare arena, with its members playing a vital role in shaping the nation's healthcare administrative system.

AAHAM offers educational programs through its 30 chapters and its participation in NUBC and EDI workshops, professional and technical certification programs, and other related working committees. AAHAM also conducts an annual conference (Annual National Institute) each fall providing additional educational and networking opportunities. Each of our 3,200 + members receives The Journal of Healthcare Administrative Management, Legislative Currents, eNewswatch and has unlimited access to www.aaham.org, AAHAM's interactive website.

The Benefits of Advertising in AAHAM Publications

AAHAM publications are highly valued by its members and are used as reference sources throughout the year. The publications are also used for promotional activities to nonmembers, adding exposure to other health care professionals. By including these publications in your marketing plan, you can ensure that your sales message receives the direct attention of the healthcare administrative management professionals who influence the purchasing decisions for the products and services you offer.

If your company provides products and services to these related areas, you need to be advertising with AAHAM.
